WELCOME

DEVON 4
DORSET 16
AREA MAP 18
SOMERSET 28

How great it is to know that you have picked up a copy of "The Antiques Tourist", 2017 edition. We are in our third year of publication, with solid growth year on year. You probably found this copy in an antiques, vintage or reclamation business, or possibly at a tourist attraction or Tourist Information Centre. Wherever you found it, hopefully this publication demonstrates our commitment to getting out the message – that Devon, Somerset and Dorset are fantastic counties to explore! Whether you are enjoying a few days browsing interesting antique shops; are dedicated dealers looking for secret "finds"; or just out for the ride, exploring our glorious region, this is the publication for you!

We have a vast array of themed businesses listed here, covering an area from Wimborne in south east Dorset, right through to Appledore in North Devon, and so many places in between.

There is also an article on walking the Lower River Exe near Exeter, giving you the chance of some fresh air, whilst enjoying the lovely views of the river estuary.

We hope you find this publication useful; many dealers carry a copy in their vehicles as a quick reference guide when in out-of-the-way places, whilst may others use it to supplement their existing knowledge.

If you own a compatible business and missed out this year, please get in touch for next year, or we can add you to our website.

Whatever your mission, welcome to the South West of England - and good hunting!

Anthony Bucke, Editor.

THE LOWER EXE VALLEY

Lower Exe Valley

The River Exe runs south from its source near Simonsbath on Exmoor. Despite being in close proximity to The Bristol Channel (5 miles), the stream flows in a southerly direction for 60 miles, issuing through the Exe Estuary at Topsham and Exmouth.

Exeter and Tiverton have featured greatly in struggles of power and industry along the River Exe. Throughout history dams and weirs were placed across the great river, to try to restore water to the Tiverton area, and in order to harness the water power. Lower down, dams were placed near Powderham Castle to ensure the regular flow of water for mills in that area. The situation appeared final when Isabella de Fortibus, The Countess of Devon installed a weir in 1284.

All of this caused havoc with salmon fishing and the access for shipping to Exeter Quay. This was largely intentional, as much of the disruption was caused by those with a vested interest in the rival quay at Topsham.

Then in 1563 Exeter traders commissioned the construction of a canal from the estuary below the weir, allowing shipping to sail right into Exeter Quay once more.

Over the next 100 years the canal was improved to provide us with the double locks which still exist today, alongside which is the hugely popular pub of the same name.

A Walk Through History.

All of that intrigue, industry and duplicity over the centuries, now provides a wonderful opportunity to walk along the canal and river today. A simple walk starts at Exeter's Antiques Centre, EX2 4AP on the historic Exeter Quay. After wandering around the centre, why not sample a tea or coffee, before setting off on the west side of the quay, heading south along the canal. Just keep the water on your left hand side. You soon walk behind the industrial area, and a quick detour here takes you to The Vintage Trading Company, EX2 8PQ, and a little further away to The Loft at Bakers Yard, EX2 8SS. Return to the canal guided by the signs to The Double Locks pub, which you soon encounter behind the massive recycling plant run by Viridor. This is an easy, level walk, so after another coffee here, (and possibly a sandwich?) press on southwards through very rural, grassed and reeded areas, before arriving at the canal swing bridge on Bridge Road – the old Exeter bypass. Beware - busy traffic!

Here you have a choice. Turn right and then follow the road (wide verge) towards Exminster. At the signs for The Swans Nest, turn left and you will soon encounter Tobys Reclamation Yard, EX6 8DZ – well worth the effort to browse around their extensive showrooms and yard area.

Alternatively, take the opportunity here to cross the canal at the Countess Wear swingbridge, before crossing the River Exe to its eastside. Turn immediately right into Glasshouse Lane, from where the footpath meanders through delightful cottages, before passing under the M5. You cannot miss this mighty motorway, due both to the noise, and the massive concrete structures carrying it over the River Exe. Take care, as this is more demanding walking, and this section of the footpath under the M5 is only passable at times of low tide. Emerge the other side of the M5 onto playing fields, then past The Passage House Inn to the town of Topsham, and finally the antiques centre at Topsham Quay, EX3 0JB. Keen walkers may wish to savour more of the Dutch-inspired architecture of Topsham, and continue a few hundred yards further down the estuary along The Goat Walk.

Conveniently on the quay at Topsham is the bus stop, with frequent buses to return you to Exeter City centre.
